I always been fascinated by everything simple and perfectly working, so when I discovered internet I knew what would be my job once I grown up.

I followed my passion, graduating from the Politecnico of Milan with a degree in Multimedia Communication Design, and then working for several agencies in Milan, Italy.

Internet is not only a system to find information, I foresee many more opportunities coming from the mix of existing data and solution with an ever growing passion for experimenting and pushing the current boundaries of the web.

Like every computer "geek", I spend a large amount of my time in front of the screen trying to create and resolve the issues that arise from the projects I work on. But it does not stop me from having a social life. During my free time I enjoy going out with my friends, taking photographs, going to concerts, watching movies and of course spending time with my lovely girlfriend. From the moment in which I moved to London this city has amazed me and I know that it will not cease to do it.
