I am a freelance photographer specialising in pictures for editorial, PR corporate and advertising clients in the UK and across Europe.
I started in 1986 with a photograph published in my local paper. From there 1988 I studied at Newcastle College for a yr and then went onto work for studios around the north east and London. 1990 spent a little time as a cruise ship photographer then in 1991 ending up in a large studio in Edgeware photographing products for Dixons, Currys and The Argos catalogue. In 1997 I left and went to Brighton University gaining a BA in editorial photography and graduated in 2000.

2001 moved back to London I worked for national publications including the Observer, the Independent on Sunday and Top Gear, Evo magazines, as well as working for PR agencies and marketing companies in London. Also had the privilege of photographing events at Parliament, Various Embassies, Kensington Palace and Buckingham Palace.
