Born in the sleepy pueblo of Los Angeles, I spent a considerable part of my youth in nearby Glendale, ultimately succumbing to the siren song of Orange County in order to live within sight of the Pacific Ocean. I then cheerfully commuted between OC and LA, engaging in a nonstop laff riot in the realms of advertising, illustration, cartooning and Disney. I even managed to bluff my way past the guards once or twice as an illustrator of record forever ensconced in the Library of Congress.

I can often be found roaming the halls of the World Headquarters campus of R morgan illustration & design in my role as Head Art Guy in Dana Point, CA, illustrating, designing, sorting my flag collection and wearing hats. It's a good life. In the immortal words of the great philosopher Steve Martin, "I get paid for doin' this."
